"A Study of Results Overlap and Uniqueness among Major Web Search Engines," by Amanda Spink, Bernard J. Jansen, Chris Blakely, and Sherry Koshman. Information Processing and Management 42, no. 5 (September 2006): 1379–1391.

"...This paper reports the results of a major study examining the overlap among results retrieved by multiple Web search engines for a large set of more than 10,000 queries.... Findings show that the percent of total results unique to only one of the four Web search engines was 84.9%, shared by two of the four search engines was 11.4%, shared by three of the Web search engines was 2.6%, and shared by all four Web search engines was 1.1%. This small degree of overlap shows the significant difference in the way major Web search engines retrieve and rank results in response to given queries. Results point to the value of metasearch engines in Web retrieval to overcome the biases of individual search engines" (abstract).

"Visualization-based Information Retrieval on the Web," by Sherry Koshman. Library and Information Science Research 28, no. 2 (2006): 192–207.

Koshman "reviews some of the human perceptual theory behind the graphical interface of information visualization systems, analyzes iconic representations and information density on visualization displays, and examines information retrieval tasks that have been used in visualization system user research" (abstract).

Corrigendum to "From the Editor…Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde or How Reasonable Ideas Can Turn Out Badly" [The Journal of Academic Librarianship 32 (2006) 347–348]

by David F. Kohl, Editor-in-Chief

Available online 7 November 2006

With great appreciation and not a little embarrassment, we thank Ms. Dorothy Knee, McGoogan, Library of Medicine, University of Nebraska Medical Center, Omaha, Nebraska, for pointing out the overlooked typo involving "ice cream Sunday (sundae)" in the editorial of the July 2006 issue. Clearly, the intention was a referral to a tasty treat rather than to an intriguing version of a church social.
